

THE EXTRACTS OF FALSE PRIDE.—On Monday evening a pretty young lady, handsomely dressed, called at the jewelry store of Mr. J. Alexander Simpson, in Second street, below Market, and purchased a gold ring, valued at five dollars. She appeared to be very much of a lady. She gave a five dollar note for the ring, and took her departure. On Tuesday morning, at an early hour, just as the same store was about to be opened, another young lady called, and sought an interview with the proprietor. She asked him if a young lady had purchased a ring there on the previous evening, and if so, what kind of money did she pay for it. On receiving an answer, her worst fears were realized—she burst out crying. This strange adventure excited the surprise of Mr. Simpson, as well as his sympathy, and he endeavored to the best of his ability to calm the feelings of the fair one.

The conversation which subsequently ensued developed the facts that the young lady who had purchased the ring was a sister to the present one, was of a respectable family, moved in the higher circles of fashion, but unfortunately had not quite enough money to keep up appearances so as to mingle with the upper ten. In an unguarded moment she stole the sum of one hundred dollars from a warm-hearted friend, and five of which was spent for the ring. The store-keeper refunded the five dollar note, and the young lady gave the ring to him, she having obtained it from her erring sister shortly after it was purchased. The probability is that legal proceedings will not be instituted, and the young lady who made the false step may reform and never be publicly exposed. She may not be the only one who has stolen money to gratify false pride; there is more or less venality and corruption robed under the beauty of silks and broadcloths than most people readily imagine.—Phil. Sun.

The Hon. Charles A. Murray, author of a volume of Travels in America, and of three or four novels, is now the British Consul General in Egypt, and with his new married wife (late Miss Wadsworth, an American) was to depart for Alexandria, to assume his consular duties, towards the close of January.

Professor Hart is now engaged upon a work entitled the "Female Prose Writers of America." It is to be a royal octavo of five hundred pages, with numerous portraits. Authors are invited to forward to the Professor, materials for the biographical and critical notices, addressed to the care of the publishers, E. H. Butler & Co., Philadelphia. Editors are requested to edit.

The N. Y. Census Returns for the Southern District, were taken to Washington on Tuesday, by Mr. Tallmadge, the Marshal. The manuscripts filled half a dozen boxes, and formed a load for a single horse.

AN OBSTINATE SQUATTER.—A Washington correspondent writes: "I heard of one man who had squatted on a lot which Captain Sutter had sold, and on which the purchaser proceeded to build up a four story brick house. The squatter did not quit the premises, but lay there wrapped up in his blanket for most of the time, night and day, and as work advanced, he went up with it, and when my informant left, he was built up in the third story, claiming the soil, and all above it, on the common law principle."

Box in Russia.—Dickens's Dombay and son has been translated into Russian and published at St. Petersburg.

Presence of Mind.—A young lady passing down a steep street near the Exchange in this city, before the thaw commenced, was overtaken by one of the boys lying flat upon his sleigh, who was using the middle of the street for a "coast." The lady was undetermined and safely thought suddenly landed upon the boy's back. Upon reaching the bottom of the hill, she rose with great deliberation and remarked: "Young man, if you had been going the other way I should have been provoked with you—as it is I am under obligations."

The youth allowed that she ought to be, "to get a good ride for nothing, and not have to draw the sled"—Detroit Ad.

There is a breath of air and a beat of the heart amidst this world and the next. And in the brief interval of painful and awful suspense, while we feel that death is present with us, that we are powerless and the last faint pulsation here is but the prelude of endless life hereafter; we feel, in the midst of the stunning calamity about to befall us, that earth has no compensating good to mitigate the severity of our loss. But there is no girl without some beneficent provision to soften its intensity. When the good and lovely die the memory of their good deeds, like the moonbeams on the stormy sea, lights up our darkened hearts, and lends to the surrounding gloom a beauty so sad, so sweet that we would rather, if we could, dispel the darkness that environs it.

The Daily News.

NEWPORT,

BY CRANSTON & NORMAN,

127 THAMES STREET.

THURSDAY MORNING, FEB. 6, 1851.

We had hoped that the good old Whig County of Newport, and particularly the town of Newport, would be free of any participation in the treachery of the late election of U. S. Senator. But it is not so. Three of the traitors are from the County of Newport.—They are Benjamin Finch and Christopher G. Perry, of this town, and William P. Bateman, of Tiverton. We are more mortified at this, because the County of Newport has long enjoyed the glorious reputation of being Whig to the backbone, Whig all over, and nothing but Whig. She has been looked to in the darkest hours and in the severest political struggles, as the strong-hold of the party, which would invariably be true to her cause and to the principles of the party. When men were behaving bad at the North and in other parts of the State, the leading men there never entertained an anxious thought in regard to old Newport, for she was always right. They never had occasion to whip us into the traces, or to spur us on to action. Our men have been faithful and true under all circumstances, and were always as reliable as the best Damascus steel.

Alas! however, two of our Representatives have brought disgrace upon our fair and honored character; they have tarnished our hitherto spotless name, in an hour when our fortitude was of the highest importance. We actually have not the heart to speak of the first two men whom we have named, in the strong and characteristic terms which their treachery really demands; because it is well known to all that our relations with these gentlemen have not been of the most amicable character, for several years past. It is not our disposition to triumph over fallen foes; we pity them, and yet we cannot but despise their conduct. Their position is certainly a most humiliating one, for they have fallen from what they supposed to be a lofty eminence, into an actually degraded gully. They have disgraced themselves, and they have dishonored the party, and there are no palliating circumstances to shield their conduct. If their treachery was designedly committed, with a full knowledge of what they were about, then, most surely, they depart from this rule, an inevitable doom awaits them, which no talents, no money, no reputation and no previous influence can save them from.

No man can justify the votes of Benjamin Finch and Christopher G. Perry, on this question, on any ground whatever; as Representatives from the Whig town of Newport, they have grossly misrepresented the Whigs who reposed confidence in them, and the regrets of these men, now that the act is finished, are entirely unavailing. Regrets cannot atone for the injury done, and no amount of penitential sorrow can atone for the enormity of the sin, in a moral or political point of view.

The Whigs of Newport are justly indignant that they have been so basely betrayed; and their exasperation is as relentless as it is honest and just.

There are a few men in this town known as the striped-back clique, who have been making themselves very busy, for the last few days, in throwing out hints as to why the Hon. Henry Y. Cranston did not sign the Card of disclaimer in regard to the election of Gen. James. They are making their insinuations slyly, because they dare not speak out openly. We know that Mr. Cranston, from the commencement, at the caucus at East Greenwich, strongly urged upon the party the absolute and vital importance of adhering to the caucus nomination. At that caucus, at the caucuses in Providence and in both meetings of the Grand Committee, he unwaveringly voted for the caucus nominee, John Whipple. He has not signed the card, for the very good reason that, as he had no instrumentalities, either directly or indirectly, in the disastrous result of the election, he consequently has no occasion to disclaim participation in it. Notwithstanding the relation existing between that gentleman and us, as the editor of a Whig journal which is and ever has been found in its principles and true to the orthodox faith of the party, under all circumstances, we must be permitted to say that to gentlemen who know Mr. Cranston, and who have closely watched his political course for the last forty years, will for a moment question his departure from Whig principles and Whig practices. Those who slyly insinuate such a thing, are his enemies, and belong to the class of which we have already spoken, and they dare not make an open charge.

As we stated yesterday, the gentlemen who have signed the disclaimer, with of so high an order, and that no influence is so extensive, that the possessor can become a traitor to his party, and abandon its principles by the delivery of its rights to the enemy, without suffering a traitor's penalty.

But those who were desirous to be great have fallen—yes, they have fully fallen; and they alone are not disgraced by this act of treachery. If it was so, the case would not be so bad. The party, here and elsewhere, shares in the stigma, for the Whigs have lost what they cannot possibly regain under six years.

John Whipple was the fairly nominated candidate of the Whig party in caucus, and he should have received a full party support in Grand Committee; but there were men who refused to be bound by the doings of the caucus. They bolted from the nomination, and they thus continued to fan the disorganizing and ruinous flame which James F. Simmons lit in 1845. These men are manifestly to blame for their conduct, and they should be held responsible for it by the party. It was urged, by experienced members of the party, at the caucus in East Greenwich, in October, and again at that in Providence, just previous to the Senatorial election, that it was vitally important for the welfare of the party that all the members should pledge themselves to stand by the nomination of the Caucus. Had this timely and wise counsel been heeded, all this trouble would have been saved—these men would not have proved recreant to their party and its principles, by voting for Gen. James—and we should have had a Whig Senator in Congress.

But the die has been irrevocably cast; the mischief has been completely done; the foul deed has been fully consummated. Upon the heads of the 14, elected as Whigs, rests the direct responsibility of the act; and upon those who refused to be bound by the decision of the caucus, rests the indirect responsibility of it, for they aided in accomplishing it. The latter laid the train, and the former touched the lighted match to the powder. Past history most clearly shows that there is no political graves so deep as that which traitors dig for themselves; and although they may make the most strenuous efforts to keep out of it, their struggles only sink them still deeper in it. Surely, this is exemplified in the case of James F. Simmons.

Men must be politically as well as morally honest, if they expect to retain the confidence of their party, and the respect of their constituents. They must depart from this rule, an inevitable doom awaits them, which no talents, no money, no reputation and no previous influence can save them from.

No man can justify the votes of Benjamin Finch and Christopher G. Perry, on this question, on any ground whatever; as Representatives from the Whig town of Newport, they have grossly misrepresented the Whigs who reposed confidence in them, and the regrets of these men, now that the act is finished, are entirely unavailing. Regrets cannot atone for the injury done, and no amount of penitential sorrow can atone for the enormity of the sin, in a moral or political point of view.

The Whigs of Newport are justly indignant that they have been so basely betrayed; and their exasperation is as relentless as it is honest and just.

There are a few men in this town known as the striped-back clique, who have been making themselves very busy, for the last few days, in throwing out hints as to why the Hon. Henry Y. We know that Mr. Cranston, from the commencement, at the caucus at East Greenwich, strongly urged upon the party the absolute and vital importance of adhering to the caucus nomination. At that caucus, at the caucuses in Providence and in both meetings of the Grand Committee, he unwaveringly voted for the caucus nominee, John Whipple. Those who slyly insinuate such a thing, are his enemies, and belong to the class of which we have already spoken, and they dare not make an open charge.

As we stated yesterday, the gentlemen who have signed the disclaimer, with three or four exceptions, are those who bolted from the Caucus nomination, and supported Mr. Simmons, or else cast scattering votes. If these same gentlemen, who are now so loudly disclaiming participation in the Treason, had faithfully discharged their duty and sustained the caucus nomination, they would now have no cause to sign disclaimers. While the 14 are guilty of Treason, these others are guilty of Treason in the second degree, to characterize their offence by no harsher appellation.

CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4th.

SENATE.—The report of the directors of the mint was received and read; also the report of the Secretary of State, with the correspondence relating to the position and right of the Hudson's Bay Company.

Mr. Atchison presented a petition for the value of the slave hired by the quartermaster of the United States army, who it appears has escaped.

Mr. Hall moved to lay the petition on the table. Lost.

After some debate, the petition was referred to the committee on claims.

Mr. Hale presented a petition for the repeal of the fugitive slave law. Laid on the table.

Mr. Baldwin, of Arkansas, presented a petition in favor of the acquisition of Cuba by the United States.

HOUSE.—After the usual opening business, the House went immediately into committee of the whole on the state of the Union and resumed the consideration of the bill to establish a branch mint at New York and San Francisco.

ALBANY, Monday, Feb. 3.

She Cleveland Plaindealer of Thursday has a dispatch from Columbus of the same date, as follows: First ballot for U. S. Senator, Griswold, Whig, 46; Payne, Opp, 40; Giddings, 11; blanks, 4. Great excitement prevailed. Seven members were absent. The parties in the Legislature stand. 51 Whigs, 47 Opp, 10 Free Soilers. The fourth ballot was, Griswold, 45; Payne, 43; Giddings, 12; Taylor, 1; Allen, 1; two not voting.

ALBANY, Feb. 4.

The Democrats, last night, after a stormy discussion which lasted nearly till 12 o'clock, nominated John A. Dix for U. S. Senator.

The Democrats have nominated Ex-Governor Marcy as Regent of the University.

The Senate after two ballots adjourned, without making a nomination. Mr. Beekman voted for Granger. Hamilton Fish received 18 votes.

A French surgeon has just published a treatise on the good effects on the nervous system of groaning and crying, when a person is in pain. According to his observation, those patients who give way to their natural feelings recover more speedily from hurts and operations, than others who think it mainly to restrain any utterance of anguish. He cites an instance of a man whose pulse being at 120, reduced it to 60 in the space of two hours, by crying and bawling. Hypochondriacal subjects, he says, cannot do better than groan all night and cry all day.

MARSH'S PATENT OIL.
THIS is a new invention, recently introduced, and now very extensively used by the public. Mr. Marsh is consequently receiving, (both at home and from abroad,) the very highest testimonials of the true merit, and great superiority of his new Oil, over every thing else heretofore used for light. Among them we select the following:
MARSH'S PATENT OIL.—This is the same as the newly invented Oil, for producing light, which has just been introduced to the public by Mr. Marsh. Having tried it ourselves, we are enabled to give it a high order of merit, and do so because we got more or small well burning, it is perfectly free from smoke, and is the best of all illuminating fluids, that of experience. It gives a pleasant steady light, is much cheaper than any other.

We recommend a trial to those who would cheer a beautiful light.—[Boston Journal.]

WASHING, BLEACHING AND CLEAN-ING FLUID.

THE greatest labor-saving article yet discovered
for its use, washing machines and boards generally with, and not one quarter of the labor is required to do the washing of a family.
The Fluid is a chemical compound of sufficient strength to extract all foreign substances from clothing, by simply holding a quillbrush to the

the expense is not more than that of the soap usually used; and besides this it will be seen that great wear and tear of clothing consequent upon the old method of hard rubbing upon a towel,
and the pounding thereof, is wholly avoided,
more soiling is thus made. It is entirely woman's friend.

I am warranted to give perfect satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

WEBSTER'S QUARTO DICTIONARY.
"Webster's American Dictionary may now be consulted, without reserve or qualification, as at present,"—President Olin, of the Wesleyan University, December, 1847.
"We have always considered Dr. Webster's orthography as unsurpassed in influence and accuracy in our language,"—President Wapter, of Brown University, Providence, R. I.
"We have been in the habit of using Dr. Webster's Dictionary for several years past, in preference to all others, because it far exceeds them all,"—I know, in giving and defining scientific words.—Prof. Hillecock, of Amherst College.
"The judgement and feelings are most gentle

Webster engaged in doing all that I can. Webster the standard wherever I am spoken, it deserves to be, must be, it will be,"—Professor Sizer, of Cincinnati.

Brougham, in a recent conversation with a diligent American traveler, remarked of this "has come to be" necessity to be a dictionary maker.

Webster's great work is the best Etymology-English language."—Lon. Morn. Chron. and Literary Gaz. of April 1st, speaks of the following untimely term:—"A noble monument of erudition and valuable research."

GOOD CHANCE FOR A BAKER
 I have for SALE a lot of land containing 10 1/2 acres of good land situated in the town of Mendon, Worcester county, Mass., it is 1 1/2 miles distance from four very thriving manufacturing villages; two lying at the other two south. It is one of the best opportunities for establishing a Bakery, and no Bake-house within 10 miles, the whole of land is in a corner lot, containing 10 acres, there is an application for one wishing to receive half an acre for one and sell the remaining 101.2 acres at the price of five hundred dollars, one half the price in cash, the balance may stand for a number of years if desired; the lot is well watered on the other side is a strip of young maple trees of good size, probably about 100 years in this part. There is a fine chance for the front, the land is very convenient into pasture, and for mowing for 100 cows; one part is watered by a spring, and also a large number of bearns; 21/2 miles to the lot. Fuel is very low, the best of hard wood is sold there from $20 to 65 a cord, further particulars enquire of EDWARD PARKER, Second street, Newport, or send application to
